

Maged Younes is currently Senior Policy Adviser at the Committee on World Food Security on loan from the German government. Following an academic career as Professor of Toxicology at the Medical University of Lübeck, Germany, and as Director and Professor at the German Federal Health Office, Maged joined the World Health Organization in 1991. He held various key roles both at the WHO European Centre for Environment and Health and at WHO Headquarters, in particular in the fields chemical and food safety as well as environmental and occupational health. From 2006 to 2007, he served as Head of the Chemicals Branch of the United Nations Environmental Programme (UNEP) and Acting Executive Secretary of the Rotterdam and Stockholm Conventions. He returned to WHO as Director of Governing Bodies and External Relations, Office of the Director-General, before taking on the Directorship of the Department of Food Safety and Zoonoses until his retirement from WHO in May of this year. He holds a Doctor's and a Master's degree in Biochemistry and Physiological Chemistry from the University of Tübingen and a degree of Dr. habil. in Toxicology and Biochemical Pharmacology from the Medical University of Lübeck in Germany.

Maged is Adjunct Professor of Toxicology and Biochemical Pharmacology, Medical University of Lübeck, Germany, and Visiting Professor for Risk assessment and management, Chulabhorn research Institute, Bangkok, Thailand.

MAGED YOUNES

Senior Policy Advisor

*Committee on World Food
Security at FAO
Italy*